

Travel with Pauline

My story

Pauline is thirteen years old when the Tutsi genocide in Rwanda breaks out in April 1994.

The country is engulfed in flames. Everywhere, Tutsis are hunted and killed. To increase their chances of escaping the killers, her family decides to scatter. Pauline, lost in the heart of barbarism, will witness unimaginable massacres. Pauline will miraculously escape death. She realizes how fortunate she is to be alive, when all five of her siblings, her mother, her grandmother, her grandfather, all her uncles, her neighbors, and her Tutsi friends—along with more than one million three hundred thousand Tutsis in the country—were murdered in just one hundred days by an extremist Hutu government that had been planning this massacre for over thirty years.

Despite this harrowing experience, Pauline refuses to lose hope for a better world. She invites you to discover present-day Rwanda, as well as other destinations, on the website.
